THE EFFECT OF VITAMIN C ON THE URINARY EXCRETION OF URIC ACID

BY DR. J. H. HARRIS

From the University of Chicago

Received for publication
March 1, 1935

The effect of vitamin C on the urinary excretion of uric acid has been studied by a number of investigators. In 1928, H. H. H. Harris and J. H. H. Harris reported that the administration of vitamin C to patients with gout resulted in a marked increase in the urinary excretion of uric acid. This finding was confirmed by other investigators, and it has since been established that vitamin C is a powerful uricosuric agent. The mechanism of this effect is not yet fully understood, but it is believed to be due to the ability of vitamin C to increase the renal excretion of uric acid. This effect is most pronounced in patients with gout, and it has been suggested that vitamin C may be used as a prophylactic agent in the treatment of this disease. In the present study, the effect of vitamin C on the urinary excretion of uric acid has been studied in a group of patients with gout. The results of this study are presented in the following tables.
